

Job Openings (Title: Assistant Professor)

The Faculty of Economics at the University of Tokyo is inviting applications for tenure-track assistant professor positions starting in July 2016. We are particularly interested in candidates with research interests in the areas of labor and trade, with strong preference placed on empirical studies. We invite applications from candidates with outstanding research potential and strong teaching skills. The successful candidates will teach at the undergraduate, masters, and PhD levels. We will only consider candidates who provide convincing evidence that they will complete their doctorate by August 2016.

Application Instructions:

Applicants should submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, a writing sample of current research and three letters of recommendation on the EconJobMarket web page. The application deadline is December 25, 2015.
